

Death Education and Counseling: Critical Perspectives

Lin, Chi-Yun*

Abstract

This paper is a radical and critical review of research and reflection in the domain of death education and counseling. For the most part of death education and counseling including goals, contents and methods have followed the well-worn paths taken by scientific law since the turn of the century. These paths are those of objectivity and universal phenomenon of death education and counseling rather suggests personal meanings and humanism. The meaning of critical is “involving or exercising careful judgement or observation”, grounding of theoretical and practical or methodological perspectives appeared appropriate to a critical review of death education and counseling.

Key Words: Death education · Death counseling · Grief counseling

* Associate Professor and Head of Institute of Life and Death Education and Counseling, National Taipei College of Nursing