

Life-Meaning Reconstruction of Bereaved Parents

Ho, Hsien Wen* Hsu, Ying Chu**

Abstract

The research explores about the bereaved parents has different experience of meaning of life and awakening of subject experience after a child died. It is adopted for deep-interview of the qualitative method to understand the bereaved parents how to face the deceased child and find the meaning of life through despair of living. There are six participators losing their child include two men and for females. There are five themes after data analysis :

1. The bereaved parents describe how to face and talk about child-decease happening.
2. The bereaved parents begin to explore or touch death problems after their child died.
3. The bereaved parents change their philosophy while their child dying.
4. The bereaved parents change their living object from making money to conducting service while facing their child died.
5. Religious, reinterpreting and conducting service are three important factors to help the bereaved parents to restructure their meaning of life.

---

* Adjunct Instructor, Department of Life-and-Death Studies, Nanhua University

** National Chiao Tung University Center for Teacher Education / Institute of Education Assistant Professor